

Lasers rely on selective photothermolysis to rapidly heat and fragment pigment rather than burning it away.

Blunt force trauma proves less selective than the laser.