

When sedation is involved, medical professionals must manage the airway while the tattooist manages the pigment.

The artist finally accepted that a power supply was a terrible tool for checking pulses.