
Needles repeatedly breach the epidermis and deposit pigment in the dermis.

Skin is generally uncooperative when treated like heavy masonry.