

I would rather see a studio lose one appointment than spend the next month explaining why a tattoo healed badly after a medication warning was already known.

An empty chair is the only customer guaranteed never to leave a highly descriptive one-star review.