

Medical organisations advise patients to consult a neurologist for evidence-based treatment options rather than pursuing an experimental piercing procedure.

Taking directions from the people who actually charted the territory.