

Dermal collagen declines continuously as skin ages, removing the structural scaffold that holds pigment and piercings in place.

Building a house on a shrinking foundation requires exceptional optimism.