

Mixtures entering the market initially must comply with the new label rules on the exact day the transition takes effect.

Which makes midnight the perfect time to bury the old bottles in the landlord garden.