

Metal jewellery marketed as nickel-free often contains cobalt or palladium which trigger immune responses in sensitive clients.

The marketing department has successfully negotiated a truce with the dictionary.