

Infrared radiation from sunlight elevates tissue temperature and accelerates pigment fading chemistry regardless of topical protection.

A perfectly protected tattoo can still roast like a holiday turkey.