

Products labelled as nickel-free may still contain levels of cobalt or palladium that trigger reactions in sensitised clients.

The label forgot to mention the accompanying accomplices.