
Applying a fraction of the recommended sunscreen thickness drastically reduces the real world protection factor.

Lotion droplets face insurmountable odds against the sky.