

The protective layer on surgical steel degrades over time in a healing piercing environment allowing trapped allergens to release.

The metal is experiencing a complete nervous breakdown.