

Feet are considered the lowest part of the body in Thai etiquette and must remain tucked away from the master and shrines.

Casual gymnastic stretching routines are highly incompatible with basic cultural respect.