

Flaking coatings at thread edges create tiny crevices that pose hygiene concerns in unhealed piercings.

Her pursuit of hygiene involved an ornamental feather duster and a profound misunderstanding of microscopic crevices.