True black is physically impossible to achieve through titanium anodisation alone.

The void of darkness politely declines the invitation.