

If an anodised surface is scratched, the exposed titanium naturally reforms its protective oxide in air.
The grand ritual of breathing on it does most of the work.