

The hydrophobic nature of standard fluoropolymers actively encourages protein adsorption and subsequent bacterial adhesion.

Using a barbell as a protein shake strainer yields disappointing results.