

A large portion of earrings sold in strictly regulated markets still release nickel above legal limits.

The perimeter shields were breached by a butterfly back.