

Nerve endings that detect mechanical stimulation are distributed highly unevenly across different body zones.

The tactical map suggests flanking the outer deltoid instead.