

Nickel is the most common contact allergen in the world, affecting an estimated 10 to 15 percent of the adult population.

The local forecast called for scattered zippers.