Porous plastic materials generate intense surface friction that creates jagged micro-tears during the insertion process.

The cheapest option usually demands payment in entirely different currencies.