

Excess scar tissue forms a fixed biological ridge that cannot be pushed back inside the earlobe.
Forward momentum is notoriously difficult to fold backward.