

The limiting factor in stretching is tissue capacity rather than the confidence of the person holding the plug.

Blind optimism remains remarkably ineffective against solid matter.