

Re-stretching previously stretched lobes requires caution because the tissue already contains scar material.

History repeats itself with significantly less elasticity.