

The structure of a campaign should be dictated by local geography, balancing convention visitor capture against reactivating dormant clients.

Knowing whether to catch tourists or wake up locals saves considerable yelling into the void.