

Implant-grade titanium contains no measurable nickel and inherently passes European leaching tests.

Using a magic wand on elemental metal is exactly why he lost his research grant.