

Unlike titanium, stainless steel must undergo rigorous batch testing to prove compliance with safety limits.
Tasting the barbells like soup is an unorthodox approach to verifying metallurgical purity.