

The microscopically thin layer on gold plated jewelry inevitably rubs off under the constant friction of a moving piercing.
Friction remains the undisputed heavyweight champion of the universe.