

Biological evaluation standards act as laboratory verified statements about how polymer material interacts with living tissue over time.

The potted plant proved to be a terrible conversationalist.