

Trade association manuals offer member guidance rather than legally enforceable standards.
Health inspectors remain completely immune to association guidelines.