

Sweat travels across the skin, collecting bacteria and delivering them directly into the healing wound track.

The epic quest to move microscopic dirt particles from forehead to piercing was a resounding success.