

Summer heat dilates blood vessels and increases swelling, prolonging normal fluid drainage.

Arctic parkas proved remarkably ineffective for cooling.