

A translated form or qualified interpreter is legally required if the client cannot read the consent document.

Charades remains an untested legal defence.