

Tanned skin possesses elevated melanin activity that substantially increases the risk of blistering.

The pastry camouflage failed to convince the physician.