

Older tattoos have less superficial pigment, paradoxically requiring more treatment sessions as the remaining ink sits deeper in the dermis.

The cowards have retreated into the subterranean bunker.