

Industrial bars mechanically connect separate anatomical sites so stress on any end transfers completely across. Ear architecture demands rigorous load-bearing calculations.