

Assembling jewelry from entirely different alloys inside a weeping wound provides all the necessary elements to build a working galvanic cell.

The quest for a better breakfast required forbidden metallurgy.