

Reference tests simulate human wear to measure metal release over time in a laboratory setting.

Staring intensely at synthetic sweat is a legitimate scientific career.