

Items inserted into pierced body parts require much stricter release limits than items resting on unbroken skin.

Intact skin is vastly more forgiving than a freshly excavated flesh tunnel.