

A photograph captures ideal alignment for a fleeting moment rather than daily mechanical reality.

Reality ruins perfectly good lighting.