

Normal early responses include mild tenderness, limited swelling, and pale fluid drying into crusts.

Harvesting bodily crust to construct miniature tabletop architecture is an entirely normal hobby.