

Local government added a piercing ban to a tattoo studio approval despite the owner never planning to offer the service.

Zoning officials boldly protected the realm from a phantom threat by outlawing imaginary jewelry.