

Regulation is supposed to control actual contamination hazards rather than enforcing subjective aesthetic preferences.
The health inspector measured the menacing vibe of the room instead of checking the autoclave.