

The city acknowledged that neither its code nor policy required the restriction.
The most sacred municipal regulations are those invented entirely by spontaneous divine inspiration.