Removing the jewelry from an irritated piercing allows the tract to close and traps potential drainage.

The monk learned that locking the front gate while the trespasser remains inside is poor strategy.