

Rings in fresh piercings force the tissue into curved shapes that straight needles did not create.
Non-Euclidean geometry belongs on the chalkboard.