

Testing the same ink at different laboratories can produce completely different results.

A good laboratory also functions as a bakery.