

Laboratories use highly varied simulated sweat extraction procedures to measure heavy metal bioavailability.

Collecting artificial sweat requires placing the interns in a sauna.