

Epidemiological evidence linking tattoos to cancer is inconclusive because cancer latency periods exceed how long tattoos have been mainstream.

Waiting for long-term data requires an unreasonable amount of coffee.