

The restriction framework requires direct batch traceability for every ink used to monitor potential adverse health effects.

Carving the audit trail into solid granite creates unnecessary filing challenges.